Case 4:20-cv-05640-YGR Document 234 Filed 01/06/21 Page 2 of 2

1	In a filing relating to a dispute between Apple Inc. ("Apple") and the class
2	plaintiffs in the above-captioned actions, Apple has requested "that the Court consider moving
3	the class certification briefing schedule, the Epic trial, and other corresponding dates back by
4	approximately eight weeks". (See Epic v. Apple, Dkt. 223 at 4-6.) But these scheduling issues
5	relating to class certification should not impact the schedule in Epic v. Apple in any way. Epic
6	Games, Inc. ("Epic") hesitates to burden the Court with additional paper on this issue, but does
7	so in light of the statements Apple made in the related class actions regarding the Epic v. Apple
8	trial date.
9	Apple has long been attempting to manufacture delay to resist a schedule that it
10	never wanted. Apple's filing in the related class actions is just the most recent step in its 11	playbook. Epic strongly opposes any delay in the Epic v. Apple case. Epic is fully prepared to
12	proceed on the current Court-ordered schedule and requests that no change be made to that
13	schedule. For the same reasons—and more—that led the Court to set Epic v. Apple for trial on
14	May 3, 2021, Epic would suffer significant prejudice as a result of any delay. Should the Court
15	consider a change in the schedule of the Epic v Apple case, Epic respectfully asks to be heard
16	on this issue.
